University and Agency Partnership Initiative

To help address the growing demand and need for homeland security academic programs across the country, CHDS created the University and Agency Partnership Initiative (UAPI). The UAPI bundles CHDS resources to build a national network of homeland security academic programs. CHDS serves as a clearing house for sharing at no cost homeland security curriculum, course materials, and multi-media lectures from not only CHDS but dozens of other UAPI partners. The UAPI is a cost-effective multiplier effect that increases by tens of thousands the number and diversity of people with access to homeland security education. Through the UAPI, CHDS has assisted 370 colleges and universities to develop their own homeland security academic programs. CHDS teach-the-teacher workshops facilitate faculty development for other schools and assist them in jump starting their own homeland security course offerings by reducing the expense and difficulty of institutions having to “reinvent the wheel” and build curricula and programs from inception.
